

Disclaimer – Rules of conduct under antitrust law

Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH follows a strict compliance policy, which is set out in its Code of Conduct and Code of Ethics (Compliance \(giz.de\)). Through their participation at this meeting, attendees confirm that they share in principle these compliance requirements. In particular, attendees undertake to comply with applicable competition law regulations rules and not to engage in any actions that restrict competition or in any other breaches of the competition law regulation in connection with or during the meeting.

The attendees acknowledge that the purpose of meetings and other communications between them will be limited to enhancing the Global Project Quality Infrastructure's goals, as amended from time to time.

The attendees are aware of applicable restrictions by statutory legal provisions, such as in particular, but without limitation, European and national competition law. Any exchange of information and activities among the attendees shall comply with these provisions. Each attendee is responsible for its own compliance with European or national competition law. It is acknowledged that GIZ bears no liability whatsoever towards the attendees for compliance of the cooperation with European and national competition law.

In particular, attendees undertake not to discuss or coordinate activities relating to competitively sensitive information or specific market behaviour, particularly with regard to prices, price components, capacity, terms of sale, demarcation of sales areas or customer allocation, non-competition agreements or the submission of tenders.

If the attendees should obtain knowledge of this type of behaviour in connection with or during this meeting, they are obliged to inform the project organisers (info@gpqi.org) about it immediately. Attendees accept that, despite information held by the project organisers, the organisers are not responsible for any possible breach of competition law regulations. Every individual is personally obliged to examine whether their own actions meet the competition law requirements.